PATENTS-IN-SUIT

8. The '996 patent entitled "System and method for enabling transactions between a web server and an automated teller machine over the Internet" was duly and legally issued to inventor Richard Hiers Wagner on February 1, 2005. See Exhibit A.

9. The '259 patent entitled "Open network system for I/O operation including a common gateway interface and an extended open network protocol with non-standard I/O devices utilizing device and identifier for operation to be performed with device" was duly and legally issued to inventor Richard Hiers Wagner on June 1, 2004. See Exhibit B.

10. The '476 patent entitled "Open network system and method for I/O operations with non-standard I/O devices using an extended open network protocol" was duly and legally issued to inventor Mr. Wagner on June 14, 2005. See Exhibit C.

11. In the early 1990s, Mr. Wagner recognized that the Internet provided a network where nontraditional devices could communicate and share information. While traditional computers (e.g., a combination of a QWERTY keyboard and display screen) had well-known language protocols in place to facilitate the exchange of information on the Internet, there was a need for the ability for nontraditional devices (e.g., those lacking both a QWERTY keyboard and display screen) to communicate on the network as well.

12. Mr. Wagner dedicated himself to inventing the language protocols necessary to open the network to all manner of intelligent electronic devices.

13. The idea was to define an architecture for pervasive peer-to-peer network connectivity of intelligent appliances, wireless devices, and PCs of all form factors that would be easy to use and flexible for connectivity to ad hoc or unmanaged networks whether in the home, a small business, public spaces, or attached to the Internet.

14. Mr. Wagner's envisioned architecture is designed to support zero-configuration, "invisible" networking, and automatic discovery for a breadth of device categories. This means a device can dynamically join a network, obtain an IP address, convey its capabilities, and learn about the presence and capabilities of other devices.

15. Mr. Wagner's inventions are described in the '996, '259, and '476 patents (among other patents).

16. All right, title and interest to these patents was initially assigned to the company Datascape, Inc.

17. The '996, '259, and '476 patents, and the patent family from which they are members, are battle-tested; they have been asserted against over 40 companies in patent infringement actions resulting in millions of dollars in settlements.

18. In addition, Mr. Wagner's patents have been cited by the United States Patent Office against other applications over 1000 times and have held up against hundreds of pieces of prior art. Additionally, both the '259 patent and '476 patents have survived reexamination proceedings from the United States Patent Office.

19. On April 15, 2014, Datascape assigned the '996, '259, and '476 patents to ONS, a wholly owned subsidiary of WiLAN, Inc. ("WiLAN").

20. WiLAN and its wholly owned subsidiaries partner with individual inventors and small companies with limited resources and help them contend against large, unauthorized infringers such as Nautilus Hyosung.

INFRINGING GOODS/SERVICES

21. It has recently come to ONS's attention that Nautilus Hyosung infringes the '996, '259, and '476 patents.

22. Nautilus Hyosung manufactures, sells, offers for sale, and uses devices such as its Halo Series, NH Series, and MX Series ATMs (the "Nautilus ATMs").

23. These devices fall within the scope of the '996, '259, and '476 patents.

24. The '996 patent discloses a system and method for implementing financial transactions over the Internet.

25. For example, claim 1 of the '996 patent provides:

An automated teller machine (ATM) for implementing financial transactions with a server over an open network comprising:

a computer having memory and a processor, the computer being coupled to an open network for communication with a server;

at least one non-standard input/output (I/O) device coupled to the computer for performing at least a portion of a financial transaction; and a computer program in the memory of the computer and executed by the processor for interpreting extended open network protocol statements received over the open network to control the at least one non-standard I/O device to which the computer is coupled.

Exhibit A, '996 patent, col. 19, ln 62 to col. 20, ln 9.

26. Similarly, the '259 patent discloses a system that permits non-standard, (i.e. non-desktop/laptop computers) devices to communicate over an open network.

27. For example, claim 1 of the '259 patent provides:

A system for supporting communication between processing systems and non-standard I/O (input/output) devices over an open network comprising:

a server that processes extended open network statements, said server being communicatively coupled to an open network;

a first non-standard I/O device communicatively coupled to said open network; and a client program executing within said first non-standard I/O device for processing extended open network statements so that said first non-standard I/O device may communicate with said server.

Exhibit B, '259 patent, col. 19, ln 65 to col. 20, ln 10.

28. Additionally, claim 14 of the '476 patent provides:

A method for processing extended open network protocol statements so a non-standard I/O device may communicate with a processing system over an open network comprising:

receiving extended open network protocol statements over an open network;

and processing said received extended open network protocol statements to control an operation associated with a non-standard I/O device.

Exhibit C, '476 patent, col. 22, ln 6 to ln 14.

29. The Nautilus ATMs are computers/non-standard I/O devices which utilize non-standard I/O devices such as receipt printers and/or touchscreens.

30. Generally, these devices communicate with open networks through the use of extended open network protocol statements. These devices also utilize client programs for such communications.

31. Given this, they fall within the scope of the claims of the '996, '259 and, '476 patents.
